

CAUTION!

DON'T BE FOOLED!

The California Teachers Empowerment Network, the Choice for Teachers, My Pay My Say, and the Freedom Foundation sound nice enough, right?

Well, they aren't.

Groups such as these claim to represent educators, but they don't. Funded by corporate billionaires who are trying to privatize education by weakening our union, these groups are misrepresenting their real agenda: Put the unions out of business.

Here's a news flash.

We're not a business. We're a union of professionals dedicated to all students.

We're educators who value investing time and resources in our students, instead of trying to privatize public schools for the sake of profits.

We're champions of human and civil rights. And we're proof that unions are the only hope for working families at a time when the economy is rigged against us.

Our history proves our power.

For 155 years, CTA has been standing up for working people, our students and the communities we serve. We've gotten pretty good at it through the years and have stood firmly in the way of those wanting to make profits out of public education coffers.

Attacks on CTA are not going to stop. Some groups will try to discredit us and confuse you—for example, a new anti-labor group going by the name of California Association of Educators. Don't be confused. You are in the right place to stand up for students and the middle class.

Learn more about our track record of advocacy at www.cta.org/150.