The Human Rights Department unites all aspects of both unionism and public education and supports the CTA Mission Statement and Strategic Plan.

The department is an integral part of CTA and the union movement. Human rights issues are at the core of all public education components, including student learning and achievement, school culture, teacher quality, and parent and community engagement.
In Memory of Julius Thomas

Julius Thomas was a faculty member in counseling at Rio Hondo College (Whittier). In addition to being a cadre trainer, Julius served in various positions in CCA and CTA and as one of the NEA Directors from California on the NEA Board.

In 2021, he was awarded the prestigious NEA Higher Educator of the Year Award for championing faculty and student rights and the NCHE’s James Davenport Memorial Award for service to the union.

Julius most recently served as the Southern BIPOC Director on the CCA Board. He leaves behind family, friends and colleagues. May his memory be a blessing.

Find out more about the amazing work Julius was involved in with NEA and more from CTA in their article honoring a life well and fully lived.
Cadre Training Program

Overview of Content Areas

Transformative Social Emotional Learning
Transformative SEL examines and addresses the root causes of inequity to develop collaborative solutions that lead to personal, community, and societal well-being. It emphasizes the development of identity, agency, belonging, curiosity, and collaborative problem-solving.

Racial Justice Advocacy
The Racial Justice Advocacy content area seeks to provide and promote education and action to dismantle systemic racism in education and within our communities. Our trainers endeavor to highlight the lived experiences of the global majority in a racialized society while offering ways to be change agents and promoters of social justice and racial equity. In exploring racial justice, we wish to amplify the intersections of race, gender, language, sexual orientation, class, ableism, etc., to promote liberation for all through continued action.

LGBTQ+ Leadership Advocacy
LGBTQ+ Leadership Advocacy is dedicated to LGBTQ+ members and allies by uplifting members, students, and communities by working toward LGBTQ+ liberation, with a focus on intersectionality. The training will clearly define LGBTQ+ safe spaces and how to create and maintain them to prevent and end violence. This work is dedicated to creating spaces for our members to foster joy, community, and empowerment.

Women's Leadership Advocacy
In the women's advocacy leadership and rights content area, we will illuminate the issues impacting self-identified womxn and girls in schools, unions, and communities. We will focus on gender justice broadly, with special attention paid to marginalized and BIPOC communities, and will offer healing-centered strategies and tools to promote women's rights.

Black, Indigenous, People of Color (BIPOC) Leadership Advocacy
The BIPOC Leadership Strand critically examines union structures, prioritizes BIPOC voices and perspectives, and navigates barriers preventing BIPOC engagement. By cultivating a shared space where BIPOC thrives, we ensure our collective power.
What is a Cadre Trainer?

So, You Think You Know SEL?

Returning to school has been stressful for educators and students. Educators must learn to manage their stress to work effectively with students. This session will allow participants to explore their personal experiences with stress. Cadre trainers will share strategies for self-managing stress in both educators and students.

Empathy and Compassion Dialogues

This session will define empathy through an SEL lens and explore how sympathetic responses have impacted marginalized communities. Participants will also learn how empathetic listening can build authentic relationships and how a collective healing approach can create a sense of belonging for all students.

Overworked, Over-Tasked, Overwhelmed, Over It?

Working in public education is emotional labor, and it’s critical that we find ways to cope and care for ourselves. The term Self-Care has been thrown around so much lately that it is easy to disregard it and feel like it is not something you can fit into your busy schedule. But studies (and your physical health) show your mental health cannot take a back seat. Self-care is incredibly beneficial for your mental & physical health, which affects all areas of your life. Join us as we discuss how we can work on lowering stress improve mental health, and learn practical self-care tips you can implement today.

Beyond Straight Care

This session will explore the unique challenges and needs of students who identify as BIPOC and LGBTQ+. Per research, LGBTQ+ youth of color are at a higher risk of suicide and other self-harming behaviors. School-based social-emotional learning tailored to BIPOC LGBTQ+ students can offer a promising and safe environment for experiential, compassionate, and possibly life-saving support. Participants will learn to appreciate the historical struggles of being LGBTQ+ and BIPOC and use empathetic listening and vigilance to build authentic relationships with students. We hope such efforts will lead to collective healing and an accepting, equitable, and affirming future for all LGBTQ youth.
Decolonizing the Classroom and Me

This session is for folx who are aware of racial injustices and are ready to break down further internalized colonialism and racism within our thinking, practices, and schools. Facilitators for this session aim to invite dialogue about our internalized colonial mentality and how it can affect our professional interactions, campus culture, and students. Topics discussed include but are not limited to the micro aggressive nature of Eurocentric mentality (how it manifests itself in the classroom), critical race theory, and formidable ways to disrupt oppressive structures. Facilitators aim for participants to leave this session feeling uplifted and encouraged with action plans while continuing a self-examination of our contributive behaviors to racial oppression.

Moving Beyond Awareness to Allyship: How Educators Can Take Action

This workshop will share how you can further develop your social justice activism. Activists who attend this workshop will better understand the importance of their growth within the social justice movement. Throughout the workshop, we will identify some of the key components of racism, recognize where you are as an activist, cover the differences between being an ally and a co-conspirator, and discuss how solidarity is a verb. The outcomes of this workshop are for activists to find ways to take meaningful action safely.

Confronting the Rise of White Nationalist Ideology in Schools

Schools have become battlegrounds and recruitment sites for extremist organizing and white nationalist groups targeting young people. Youth and adults are susceptible to rhetoric from white nationalist groups and conspiracy theories. This session will empower educators to recognize and respond to white nationalist rhetoric in the classroom. Participants will leave equipped to help students understand tactics like scapegoating, false equivalency, conspiracy theories, and hateful ideologies disguised as humor. They will also gain access to a free toolkit (published by the Western States Center) to support prevention strategies throughout their school and communities.
Celebrating the LGBTQ+ Leadership Advocacy Program

Seeing the Framework in Rainbow: Working with the CA Social Studies Framework
This session will highlight the California Equity and Access Framework for History and Social Science and inclusive laws in California schools. The session will help allies identify age-appropriate resources for all grade levels K-12 to help supplement textbooks that may be outdated or limited in their scope. This session will also highlight relevant data about why this work should be a priority for California educators.

Supporting LGBTQ+ Students at All Levels
Looking for ways to ensure that LGBTQ+ students feel safe, welcomed, and encouraged to learn? Want to increase LGBTQ+ visibility and affirmation in your curriculum? This session will help you be the empathetic heroes your students need and help you create a more inclusive and equitable experience for all.

Supporting Trans Students
Have you struggled with the best ways to support your trans and gender-nonconforming students? Come explore a variety of issues to improve the learning environment for all students. This unique training will enhance the participant’s ability to effectively build a safe, supportive, and inclusive environment for our transgender and gender-nonconforming students.

Closets are for Clothes
Have you struggled with the best ways to support your trans and gender-nonconforming students? Explore a variety of issues to improve the learning environment for all students. This unique training will enhance the participant’s ability to effectively build a safe, supportive, and inclusive environment for our transgender and gender-nonconforming students.

Intersectionality of Disability and LGBTQ+
How many LGBTQ+ people also have a diverse ability (disability)? What issues do LGBTQ+ people who also have a diverse ability encounter? What about our LGBTQ+ youth who have diverse abilities? Who are the influential LGBTQ+ people who live with diverse abilities and are activists to follow on YouTube, Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, and TikTok? Come to this session to find out.
Women’s Leadership Advocacy

Women in Leadership: Take Your Seat at the Table
Women belong in all places where decisions are made. Let’s reflect. Is this true in your personal and public spheres? In this workshop, attendees are invited to do a deep dive on intimate table topics about what leadership looks like for them. Through listening to each other’s experiences, dialoguing, and reflecting, the objective is to identify what intentional actions are taken or not taken to make our evolving seat at the table.

Inclusive Feminism
Participants will learn about inclusive feminism by exploring those left out of mainstream feminist conversations, challenging gender binaries, and sharing how to create more inclusive spaces for all self-identified women.

It’s the Right Thing to Do – Period! Period Justice and Supporting the Dignity of our Students
Our schools are structured in ways that can deeply disadvantage students who menstruate, and educators may be unaware of the issues impacting our students. Many people in our schools also may need to understand how their actions deprive these students of fair and equal access to care and supplies needed during this time. Period justice is necessary for the dignity of our students. In this session, we will address period injustice, issues around access to menstrual products, school policies and restrooms, shame, and ways to help staff respond appropriately to menstruating students.

The Power of Consent and Disrupting Misogyny: How Educators Can Create Safer Environments for Women and Girls
The over-sexualization of women and girls and the normalization of victim-blaming are too common in our culture. In this session, we will unpack patriarchy, misogyny, and rape culture and address how to teach consent from a young age; how to teach consent in the classroom; and how educators can support can combat and counter harmful practices and norms at your school. Content warning: This session discusses the topic of rape and sexual assault.

The Balancing Act: Parenting & Caretaking While Marginalized
Being an educator is already a challenging career; when parenting and caregiving responsibilities are added, it can sometimes feel impossible to balance. This session provides historical context and current conditions for parents and caregivers in California and creates space for participants to reflect and dialogue. Let’s learn how our union can support parents and caregivers in the workplace, our rights, and mental health.

Women’s Rights, Leadership & Advocacy Dialogue: In Our Schools, Communities and Union
The Women’s Leadership Advocacy Cadre sessions explore issues impacting self-identified women and girls. This anchor session creates opportunities for participants to discuss issues, including leadership, rape culture, period justice, inclusive feminism, and caretaking.
BIPOC Leadership Advocacy

BIPOC Leadership: Is it a Secret?

This session will share ways to center BIPOC (Black, Indigenous, & People of Color) voices and perspectives within the union structure. We will also discuss navigating barriers that may prevent BIPOC member engagement. By cultivating a shared space where BIPOC members thrive, we ensure our collective power as a union.

Hey Siri, What Now? CTA Structure and Resources

BIPOC Leadership Advocacy, one of the Human Rights Cadre Training content areas, critically examines union structures, prioritizes BIPOC voices and perspectives, and navigates barriers preventing BIPOC engagement. By cultivating a shared space where BIPOC thrives, we ensure our collective power. Join this session to learn more about this content area, and share with us what resources and support you’d like to know about.

Where My People At? Finding and Creating BIPOC Groups

Do you need help connecting with others who want to advocate for Human Rights? We want to reveal CTA’s many resources to help our BIPOC members get and stay involved. We will also discuss how you can start creating space at your local by starting a Human Rights Committee and/ or a Racial Equity Affairs Committee.

They Did Not Just Say That?! BIPOCs Advocating for Justice

Not sure where to begin when advocating for justice? Discuss what you have seen and heard in your local union meetings. Learn tools to deal with racist comments and analyze your local agenda items and budget for social justice and equity issues. Leave with an action plan to advocate in your own local and beyond.

As an openly Gay CTA member, I wanted to become part of the CTA Cadre Training Program to help teachers create schools that are healthy, just, and fully equal for all LGBTQ+ people. Every student has the right to a safe, supportive, and LGBTQ+-inclusive K-12 education. To advance civil rights and social justice in our schools and communities, I will inspire, advocate, and mobilize members to work tirelessly toward LGBTQ+ liberation, with a focus on intersectionality.

Not everyone gets involved in a leadership role at their local. I wanted to get involved because as a BIPOC their aren’t enough opportunities for leadership. Being in this program I get the chance to bring to the forefront what I feel is important to my community, my ethnicity, my students, families and myself. I enjoy working with ALL educators fighting the fight against an unjust system. Understanding that we are not alone in all the obstacles set forth. Social Justice is a must in CTA and this is one way to make a difference!

I believe that teachers have a unique opportunity to promote equity and inclusivity within a system that has been designed to create systemic inequity. Teaching in CA public schools for 25 years, I’ve had the opportunity to observe patterns where particular students continue to be marginalized in our educational spaces. We are living in a time where our judgement as educators is being challenged; we see classroom libraries being papered over, lessons about accurate history being attacked, and our attempts to make all students feel included get punished. This only strengthens my dedication to equipping educators with the knowledge and tools they need to provide inclusive and equitable learning environments for all their students. The CTA Human Rights Cadre Trainer Program is a perfect place to provide some of those tools.

What inspired me to be a Social Justice Human Rights Cadre Trainer was to utilize my skills and experiences to create a space to disrupt white supremacy with fellow educators. The current political and cultural climate around Critical Race Theory, Antiracism and Equity is filled with tension and conflict. Right now is the time to organize and collaborate to transform our schools into a space that serves all children.

I wanted to be a part of the CTA Cadre Training Program because it is an opportunity to talk to more teachers about how to support so many people in the margins. I facilitate many trainings around equity and the LGBTQ+ community in my own district but wanted to be in community with educators who are also fighting to make the education system more responsive and inclusive.

Knowing that we excel when we feel seen, heard, and appreciated, I believe in empowering more teachers with the resources, awareness, and voice to make the difference we seek. We are the change, one teacher, and one student at a time. Being actively involved with CTA has given me a seat at the table to make positive changes in education and our profession. Finding my voice in a female-dominated profession, yet still underrepresented in leadership, has made me passionate about ensuring women express their strengths, as well as problem-solving ways to address the root causes of inequity. As a trainer for the CTA Cadre Training Programs, I look forward to empowering more educators on SEL, Women/BIPOC leadership, and racial and social justice advocacy.

Before I became an educator, I worked in the social work field assisting and supporting run-away, throw-away, and pregnant youth who were ostracized by society. I poured my heart into getting these youth back into school and ensuring they were given the resources they needed to be productive in society. I continued my advocacy when a family member was classified with ED and I had to fight for services on their behalf. I currently work with students who need the most love and support in correcting their behaviors and supporting teachers in bringing out the best in their students. I truly believe that all students should experience a well-rounded and just educational experience.

As an African American woman and graduate of a historically Black college, I've been empowered with knowledge of my own heritage & culture, yet I dream of a day when the systemic fair treatment of all races will exist and include equitable opportunities and outcomes. Seeing the possibility of races united motivates me to continue the work despite current and persistent injustices in our world. Frederick Douglass once stated, "No man can put a chain about the feet of his fellow man without at last finding the other end fastened about his own neck." This program reminds me and helps me to be the teacher that I needed when I was younger. I needed teachers who looked like me, teachers who listened even when I didn't say a word, and teachers who saw me as a whole child with personal experiences and culture that did not mirror that of my peers. My dedication to equity began as a member of the LGBTQ community and morphed into something more when I began teaching in a school where my students were very ethnically diverse, allowing me to witness, firsthand, the injustices of the system. However, it was not until I began teaching US history that my passion took on a shift from passive participant to empowered advocate and I realized that justice cannot occur until we all make it our mission to fight oppression. Initially, because of my political science degree background, I tried to fight this oppression in the political sphere; but I knew that was not enough. I knew that I needed to be a part of working to dismantle previous held beliefs within my own profession. Combining my passion for teaching with my passion for equity, led me to the Human Rights Cadre Trainer role.

As an undergrad student at UC San Diego, I began a long healing journey to heal from all the things in my childhood no one apologized for. I did this by learning about all the social inequities I experienced throughout my schooling and found myself validated by authors, research, and countless books that not only validated my experiences but armed me with the intellectual knowledge and vocabulary to name the racism, sexism, and homophobia I remember experiencing as a student. I wanted to become a Human Rights Cadre training to help other educators create the spaces I longed for as a student; to disrupt systems of white supremacy and anti-blackness that are embedded in our schools. As Queer Latinx elementary educator, I am so grateful and excited to share space with other educators who want to engage in thoughtful and critical reflection as it pertains to creating systematic change within the educational system.

Region 3, UTLA am an educator and I view the CTA cadre training program as a very necessary educational vehicle. Even though we live in a diverse society, many of us live in our own silos. We may intentionally or unintentionally surround ourselves with people who look, speak and think the way we do. Offering information that allows our colleagues to see and open up to people, cultures and communities they may not otherwise interact with can only be helpful in building the community I want to live in. The cadre training program, in addition to calling in those who may not otherwise engage, is also creating a beautiful space for those who are or want to do the work of creating inclusive, loving communities that further racial, social and gender justice.

Sharing knowledge with our colleagues across the state is what inspires me to become a Human Rights Cadre Trainer. If we all have the same goal to provide the support needed and the schools students deserve we can be on our way to create a more just educational system. As an educator and part of CTA ILC, training became an important component for me to be able to guide my colleagues in instructional practices in their classrooms. By being a Human Rights Cadre Trainer, I can work with other colleagues with the same goals and create the trainings our educators need in order to promote social justice. I want to learn about ways we can positively impact not only our students but their teachers, in supporting and fighting for all human rights. Coming a family that has worked tirelessly for human rights as part of the United Farmworkers, I grew up on picket lines. I want to make sure that our students, children, and grandchildren don’t go through life with their rights being taken away and their opportunities being denied. This is the time we are needed the most. There are so many states trying to take away our human, bodily, and first amendment rights. Some counties and cities here in California are doing the same. There are many who want to help, but don’t know where to start. I want to be part of that solution. I want to continue to help CTA bring these critical issue to the forefront and train others in making a difference for all of us.

I desired to be a member of the CTA Cadre Training Program because I am a change agent who is committed towards creating a more equitable experience for all students and educators. This program allows me to unlearn problematic practices pushed upon us by systems not created for people like me. With my new understanding, this program also creates space for change agents like me to share our learning knowledge, experiences, and research as it relates to topics most District shy away from. An an OUT elementary educator, it is nearly impossible to go about the day without seeing all the inequities that LGBTQIA+ individuals experience. My children experience it, by being part of a two mom family. I experience it every time I am told I can’t talk or say something about my family. The advocacy I have done at my site has led me to want to use my voice in order to encourage change in ALL elementary schools. During this extremely toxic climate where LGBTQIA+ rights are being stripped away, it is even more important to stand up in resistance and teach others the importance of protecting, accepting, and welcoming ALL students into our classrooms. The cadre program opens the doors for educators to learn and see the difference they can make in their students and families lives.

I began my LGBTQ+ advocacy journey with CTA during the 2008 Proposition 8 campaign. Prior to this, I was a site representative, local segment director, and local officer fighting for the rights of all members. Being an OUT educator, I could no longer stand idle while attacks were being made on LGBTQ+ members and students. I was appointed and later co-chaired CTA’s GLBT Issues Advisory Committee, launched the CTA LGBTQ+ Issues Conference, served on the CTA Safety in Schools LGBTQ+ Grant Committee, and now serve on the CTA LGBTQ+ Conference Planning Committee. Currently, I am an Equality California Board Member, developed the EQCA Safe & Supportive Schools Index, reviewed CA Social Science textbooks, and was an advisor on the CADoE LGBTQ+ Resource website. I also serve as Treasurer of the NEA LGBTQ+ Caucus and served on NEA’s SOGI Committee for seven years.

As a Native American woman, I understand the challenges many of our students are facing, but are unable to speak up about. I know the challenges of overcoming generational trauma and why it is so important to educate others about the Human Rights issues that affect our children, families, and their communities. These are some of the reasons why I wanted to be a part of the CTA Cadre Training program. As a Cadre trainer, I offer a California Indian perspective which allows me to best advocate for our Native communities while breaking harmful stereotypes and depictions of Native people.

As a Black woman educator, I am so often the only one in the room. And after hundreds of years of fighting for that to not be so, it still is so. The CTA Cadre Training Program offers me an opportunity to fight for something bigger than myself, for my fellow BIPOC educators as well as for my students. I strive for equality in education, especially in the areas where that seems nearly impossible. My fellow CTA Cadre Trainers are truly my people, and I am so grateful to have found a space where I am not the only one in the room.

“Abolition is about presence, not absence. It’s about building life affirming institutions.” -Ruth Wilson Gilmore
As a growing abolitionist, I am excited by the idea of holding space and holding change within our dynamic movement. Our larger society is putting pressure on educators, students, and communities to move on from the trauma caused by the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic and white supremacy. I knew serving as a CTA Cadre trainer would allow me help create brave spaces, establish accountability and commit to community action for our members to create new “life affirming institutions.” Glad to be apart of this ongoing work.

UCTA Cadre provides a tangible opportunity for educator members to be at the forefront of humanitarianism, straight up. With our formal education structures acting as an evolved plantation for cultural and linguistic genocide, CTA Cadre gives a pathway for all of us to participate in understanding what abolitionist and liberatory communities can look like. CTA Cadre, for me, is where I can gain both intellectual and community cups filled. It’s where I get to be reminded that I can be whatever my radical imagination let’s me be.

It’s an honor to be a CTA Human Rights Cadre trainer. It’s important to represent the ChicanX community as an indigenous Chicana. For so long our erasure has been upheld and it’s important along with other amazing members to decolonize the curriculum, and our classrooms, and reimagine public education. How many of our indigenous histories have been erased and what are we doing to liberate all spaces? We are in an era we have to advocate within all our intersectional plights and we can’t use already oppressive structures. to do this work in a collective format is how our union is progressivly and proactively providing our members the tools to protect the human rights of all our members.

As a BIPOC special education teacher, there are many struggles I myself and my students face on a regular basis while advocating for our needs inside and outside of the classroom. I want to network with other teachers in cadre and throughout CTA who face similar struggles while advocating for what is best for our students. I continue to learn from my colleagues about best practices when fighting for a fully funded quality public education for the communities we serve, especially for students with disabilities.

As a teacher, I know that many school districts don’t provide the proper training to help us support LGBTQ+ youth. As a mother of two LGBTQ+ children, I am acutely aware of what these children need to succeed and to feel safe in a classroom and school community. LGBTQ+ youth are more prone to homelessness, depression, suicide, and bullying. As a CTA cadre trainer, I feel that I can provide unique insight into how educators can create and provide a safe space for our LGBTQ+ students - so that our LGBTQ+ youth can thrive.

Education IS human rights. To change systemic injustice, we must start with educating our members and students.

Unions have been designed to create the best educational experience for our students. Therefore, it is our responsibility as CTA members to advocate for social, economic and racial justice for our students and members since it directly impacts learning and working conditions. I joined the CTA Cadre Training Program to help educate and empower our locals and CTA to advocate for social justice in our classrooms, California and beyond.

When I began teaching I felt very alone in my classroom. I was fortunate to find support with union colleagues. Their guidance helped be continue to develop as an educator and as an advocate. I have worked for years to understand and grow in my union. Through the Cadre Training program I hope to connect my passion for education and motivate others in the possibilities in our union.

RA's 1st generation immigrant from the Philippines, I always knew that I need to advocate and represent Asian Americans. I want to help my fellow teachers understand the importance of equity and inclusion in the classroom and advocate for our students to advocate for themselves and what they deserve.

I was inspired to join this coalition of educators seeking to dismantle harmful practices and help build and bridge more just learning spaces through social justice and anti-bias anti-racist work. The goal of encouraging more understanding, equity and joy in educational communities is critically important and more likely to be achieved through collective action. If we want to grow forward, let’s call each other in, wherever we may be in our journey towards liberatory education.
